

Contributors

Thorsten Benner is Associate Director of the Global Public Policy Institute (Berlin) and a McCloy Scholar at the Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. He studied political science, history, and sociology at the University of Siegen (Germany), the University of York (UK) and the University of California at Berkeley (USA). Until June 2001, he was a Policy Analyst at the Office of Development Studies, United Nations Development Programme, New York. Prior to joining UNDP, he was a Research Fellow with the German Council on Foreign Relations (DGAP) in Berlin and a Research Associate with the Global Public Policy Project, Washington D.C. He received scholarships from the Friedrich Ebert Foundation, the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) and the Studienstiftung des deutschen Volkes.

Email: tbenner@globalpublicpolicy.net

Web: www.globalpublicpolicy.net

Joji Carino is an Ibaloi-Igorot from the Cordillera region of the Philippines, where she has worked for many years on community research and local history, education, and campaigns. She supports indigenous communities to make their voices heard at local-global forums affecting indigenous peoples' rights and well-being. She presently works as Policy Advisor/European Office Coordinator of the Tebtebba Foundation (Indigenous Peoples International Centre for Policy, Research and Education). She also served as a Commissioner on the World Commission on Dams (WCD) and is presently a member of the Steering Committee of the Dams and Development Project (DDP), representing indigenous peoples.

Email: TongTong@gn.apc.org

92 PROGRESS OR PERIL? THE POST-JOHANNESBURG AGENDA

Maria H. Ivanova is the Director of the Global Environmental Governance Project at the Yale Center for Environmental Law and Policy. Her work focuses on international institutions and organizations, environmental policy at the national and global levels, and equity concerns. A Bulgarian national, she is currently a doctoral candidate at the Yale School of Forestry & Environmental Studies. She has worked at the Environment Directorate of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and the Swedish Environmental Protection Agency on environmental regulatory reform and water quality standards in the New Independent States of the Former Soviet Union.

Email: maria.ivanova@yale.edu

Web: www.yale.edu/gedialogue

Sascha Müller-Kraenner is Director of the Heinrich Böll Foundation's office in Washington, D.C. The Heinrich Böll Foundation is associated with the political party Alliance 90/The Greens in Germany. He is also one of the founders of, and a senior adviser to, Ecologic, the non-profit Center for International and European Environmental Policy in Berlin. From 1991-1998, he was Director for International Affairs of the "Deutscher Naturschutzring," the umbrella organization of Germany's environmental NGOs. Before that he served as chief of staff for Kornelia Müller, a Green member of the State Parliament of Saxony. He has published extensively on international relations, European integration and environmental diplomacy, and the UN climate change treaty.

Email: sascha.washington@boell.de

Web: www.boell.org

Hans Peter Schipulle is Deputy Director-General for "Global and Sectoral Policies" at the German Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development. In the Ministry, he heads a department that covers a broad range of activities, including environment, water, energy, agriculture, social, health, education and trade policies, as well as cooperation with the corporate sector. Until 1999 he served as head of the Ministry's environment, natural resource management, and forestry division. In this capacity, he represented the Ministry in various international negotiations on environment and development issues, including UNCED (Rio 1992) and WSSD (Johannesburg 2002), the Commission on Sustainable Development (CSD), the international conventions on climate change, biodiversity and desertification, and in the Council of the Global Environment Facility (GEF).

Email: schipull@bmz.bund.de

Web: www.bmz.de

Achim Steiner is Director General of IUCN-The World Conservation Union. He has worked both at the grassroots level and at the highest levels of international policy to address the interface between environmental sustainability, social equity, and economic development. In recent years, his professional focus has been on developing both conceptual and institutional bridges among very diverse interests and agendas. In Washington, where he was Senior Policy Advisor of IUCN's Global Policy Unit, he developed new partnerships between the conservation community, the World Bank, and the United Nations system. In Southeast Asia, where he worked as chief technical advisor on a program for sustainable management of Mekong River watersheds, he contributed to a new dialogue and policy process with governments and local communities to introduce political reforms for community-based natural resource management. In his most recent assignment – Secretary General of the World Commission on Dams, based in South Africa – he brought together the public sector, civil society, and the private sector in a global policy process on dams and development. His educational background includes a B.A. at the University of Oxford (Philosophy, Politics and Economics) as well as an M.A. at the University of London (Economics and Regional Planning). He also studied at the German Development Institute in Berlin (Development Economics and Policy) and Harvard Business School.

Email: achim.steiner@iucn.org

Web: www.iucn.org

Björn Stigson is currently President of the World Business Council for Sustainable Development (WBCSD). He began his career as a financial analyst with the Swedish Kockums Group. From 1971-82 he worked for ESAB, the international supplier of equipment for welding, in different positions, responsible for Finance, Operations, and Marketing. In 1983 he became President and CEO of the Fläkt Group, a company listed on the Stockholm stock exchange and the world leader in environmental control technology. Following the acquisition of Fläkt by ABB, in 1991 he became Executive Vice President and a member of ABB Asea Brown Boveri's Executive Management Group. From 1993-94 he ran his own management consultancy. On January 1, 1995 he was appointed President of the WBCSD. Since the formation of this organization in 1990, Mr Stigson has been actively involved with the business response to the sustainable development challenge. He is also presently a member of advisory councils to, among others, Unilever, OECD, The World Bank, and the governments of China and Japan.

Email: stigson@wbcsd.org

Web: www.wbcsd.org

Charlotte Streck is Counsel for International and Environmental Law with the World Bank in Washington, D.C. She was educated in both law and biology at the Universities of Berlin, Regensburg, and Freiburg in Germany, and in Cordoba, Spain. Before she joined the World Bank in 2000, she collaborated with the Global Public Policy Project, which provided strategic advice for the Secretary-General of the UN. Her work experience includes six years of legal consulting service for German state and federal administrations on compliance and enforcement issues, as well as collaboration with universities, private institutes, law firms, and NGOs within research projects on international, European, and German environmental law and policy. She is a founding member of the Global Public Policy Institute, has authored and co-authored two books, and published several articles on environmental law and policy.

Email: cstreck@globalpublicpolicy.net

Web: www.globalpublicpolicy.net

Jan Martin Witte is Associate Director of the Global Public Policy Institute (Berlin, Germany) and a European Recovery Program Scholar at Johns Hopkins University (Baltimore, MD, U.S.A.), where he is completing his Ph.D. in political science. He holds degrees from Johns Hopkins, SAIS (M.A. in international relations) and the University of Potsdam (diploma in political science). For his studies, he received scholarships from the Friedrich Ebert Foundation, the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) and the “Studienstiftung des deutschen Volkes.” His work experience includes consulting assignments at the Brookings Institution, the Corporate Strategy Group of the World Bank, and the Office of Development Studies of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). From June 1999 to June 2001 he served as a Research Associate with the Global Public Policy Project. Most recently, he worked as a Partnership Policy Officer with the Private Sector Partnership Unit of the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS).

*Email: jmwitte@globalpublicpolicy.net
Web: www.globalpublicpolicy.net*

