

Responding to forced displacement

What can UNHCR offer to development actors?

- 1 • UNHCR publishes aggregate statistics on displaced people in all countries of operation.
- A microdata library makes anonymized datasets available to the public.
- Many development actors have data-sharing agreements with UNHCR at the country level.

- 2 • UNHCR enables contacts between development actors and national refugee agencies.
- UNHCR facilitates access permits to refugee camps.
- In extraordinary cases, UNHCR may support development actors by providing vehicles or office space.

- 3 • UNHCR monitors and shares knowledge on the legal and de facto situation of refugees and other persons of concern.
- UNHCR has knowledge on the political context in displacement situations.

- 4 • A variety of coordination tools and platforms help to formulate joint goals and to identify gaps.
- Data on the needs of affected populations allow actors to design programs more effectively.

- 5 • Strategic partnerships enable exchange, coordination and standard-setting.
- Global diplomacy helps to translate strategy into commitments.
- Joint programs address the socio-economic and protection needs of displaced people and host communities alike.

- 6 • Jointly with development actors, UNHCR engages in advocacy on policy changes to the benefit of displaced people.
- Host governments are supported in implementing policy changes, through advice and data.
